
Administrative Law

Clark Hill's administrative law attorneys have extensive experience representing clients before numerous federal and state agencies, administrative and appellate courts, and legislative bodies.

Our regulatory attorneys offer seasoned, effective assistance to clients facing or seeking to improve or challenge government-mandated action. Benefitting from a deep bench of attorneys with long regulatory track records, both in and out of government, we are well-positioned to handle all types of administrative/governmental law matters.

Our attorneys have demonstrated proficiency in the following administrative/governmental law areas:

- Environmental
- Energy
- Financial institutions
- Government contracting
- Healthcare
- International trade
- Securities
- Tax

We are experienced in notice-and-comment rulemaking, rate cases, procurement and bid protests, contract claims, financial assistance (grants, loans, and cooperative agreements), audit and dispute proceedings, specialized proceedings such as the Small Business Regulatory Enforcement Fairness Act, the Freedom of Information Act, Sunshine laws, and all forms of advocacy in the administrative/policy arena.

Our attorneys have served as senior government officials, general counsel and/or senior trial level counsel in federal and state agencies. We bring a sophisticated understanding of the regulator's perspective, as well as credibility, judgment, and nuanced problem-solving approaches to advocacy efforts on behalf of firm clients. Our members have longstanding experience in major administrative law rulemakings and associated legal challenges, and many are listed as leading attorneys in the field by the ranking organizations Chambers and Partners, Best Lawyers, and SuperLawyers.
