Associate

Chinese simple: 简体中文

Courtney Gayle Taylor supports international trade clients through antidumping and countervailing duty proceedings, customs, export controls, and economic sanctions and embargoes.

Courtney guides international clients through the difficult challenges facing an increasingly globalized market, assisting in meeting regulatory hurdles, challenging opposition in the nation's designated trade courts, and navigating them through administrative proceedings.

Prior to joining Clark Hill, Courtney worked for a boutique international trade law firm in Washington, DC. While earning her J.D., Courtney interned at both the International Trade Commission and the U.S. Department of Commerce, Commercial Law Development Program. Courtney was engaged in the Alternative Dispute Resolution Society as Captain of the Frankfurt Bilateral Investment Treaty Arbitration Moot Court team at American University and as a semi-finalist in the William & Mary Negotiation Tournament. She was also staff member of the American University International Law Review, in which she wrote her note on investor state dispute settlement in the Transpacific Partnership Agreement.
