

David H. You

Senior Attorney

David H. You is a seasoned litigator in construction-related areas. He has extensive experience on both sides of the issues—which means he sees cases from both the defense and plaintiff’s perspective. His work in the construction arena includes specifically construction liability as well as general liability and professional designer liability. He is well-versed in adjacent areas including personal injury, employment and commercial business disputes. He brings to the table his five years of advanced paralegal experience working at a boutique Los Angeles firm that specialized in business disputes.

David’s practice focuses on defending architects, engineers and general contractors in various complex construction litigation. From the consumer side, he includes a concentration in commercial litigation involving breach of contract, fiduciary duties, fraud and misrepresentation, and unfair business practice claims. For clients in the planning phases of a project, he offers business and construction contract review and drafting in order to ensure they are protected.

David is fluent in Korean and works hard to help the Asian community in Los Angeles. This, coupled with his broad range of experience, has allowed him serve his Korean clients’ various needs with great success.
