... “Michigan now has 13 communities that have achieved the important ‘connected’ broadband distinction,” said MPSC Chairman John D. Quackenbush. “As communities that have completed the broadband certification process, they understand that their success includes access to reliable high-speed networks, digital literacy of residents and the use of online resources locally for business, agriculture, government, and leisure.”

The Wexford County broadband initiative team worked with Connect Michigan to assess the local broadband landscape, identify gaps and establish actionable goals and objectives. It developed a technology action plan with seven priorities: completing a vertical assets inventory; identifying, mapping, and validating broadband demand; facilitating a technology summit; developing or identifying a broadband training and awareness program for small and medium size businesses; improving education through digital learning; and promoting telemedicine in remote areas.

Wexford County joins Harbor, Inc. (Emmet County), and Gladwin, Marquette, Charlevoix, Antrim, St. Clair, Roscommon, Livingston, Mecosta, Clare, Otsego, and Ogemaw counties to earn this distinction in Michigan.

Connect Michigan is a public-private partnership between the Michigan Public Service Commission and Connected Nation to work with local governments, businesses, and citizens in the goal of increasing broadband access, adoption and use. MPSC to move to New Agency |

Gov. Rick Snyder: Michigan Agency for Energy will guide state work toward affordable, reliable solutions:
Snyder intends Valerie Brader to head agency created in executive order

Note: Governor Rick Snyder's office issued the following Press Release on March 18, 2015.

LANSING, Mich. – Michiganders need to know they'll have access to affordable, reliable energy long into the future, and a new agency will focus on coordinating efforts and decisions as the state looks to replace retiring plants with newer, cleaner sources, Gov. Rick Snyder said.

Snyder today signed Executive Order 2015-10 restructuring some state bodies and creating the Michigan Agency for Energy. Upon its creation, he intends to name Valerie Brader, now a deputy legal counsel and senior policy advisor specializing in energy issues, to head the new agency.

“Michigan families and businesses need a future without fear of unaffordable energy price spikes or widespread outages that disrupt lives and work,” Snyder said. “The new agency will oversee how our state responds to the energy challenges that we know are before us, and will work across state government to help Michigan reduce energy waste and adapt to changing needs and technology.”

Snyder, in a Special Message on Energy delivered on March 13, said the state should approach the retirement of 10 coal-fired plants in the coming years as an opportunity. Solutions will be guided by the pillars of affordability, adaptability, reliability and protecting the environment. The state also needs to ensure that decisions affecting Michigan's energy future are made in Michigan, and not in Washington, D.C. The governor announced his intent to create the new agency during his State of the State address in January.

The Michigan Agency for Energy will serve as a single agency dedicated to getting all of our departments and commissions the information and context they need to support our energy priorities.

The agency will be within the Department of Licensing and Regulatory Affairs (LARA), and the energy agency's executive director will serve as the chief adviser to the governor and the directors of state departments regarding the development of energy policies and programs.

The executive order also calls for several transfers of responsibilities to and from LARA, the Michigan Public Service Commission, the Department of Environmental Quality, the Michigan Economic Development Corporation, the Michigan Strategic Fund and the Michigan State Police.

For instance, the order transfers to the new agency the Retired Engineers Technical Assistance Program and Air Policy Director from the Department of Environmental Quality; and the Michigan Energy Office from the MEDC and the Michigan Strategic Fund. It also transfers LARA's Energy Advisory Committee authorities to the executive director of the new agency.

The MPSC will continue to operate autonomously from the agency.

Brader, 38, has worked with the administration since 2011. She previously served as chief energy policy officer at the Michigan Economic Development Corporation and as an adviser to former Idaho Gov. Phil Batt on environmental and natural resource issues. She also worked in a private law practice, specializing in environmental and corporate law.

Brader is a Rhodes Scholar with degrees from Harvard and Radcliffe Colleges, two master's degrees from University of Oxford and a law degree from Georgetown Law Center.

“Valerie has tremendous expertise in energy issues, but I’ve also appreciated her legal skills,” Snyder said. “She knows how to handle complex issues, playing a key role in resolving Detroit’s bankruptcy issues, helping restore the city’s financial foundation so it can continue to grow. I’m confident she’ll do an outstanding job in this new position, guiding decisions that will help Michiganders long into the future.”

The executive order is effective 60 days from today. The full text of the executive order is available at <<http://www.michigan.gov/snyder>>.

Verizon Partners With Techweek For Detroit’s Largest Technology Conference |

Detroit Native and Verizon Region President Lauren Love-Wright to Offer Keynote Address at Emerging Cities Summit

Note: Verizon Wireless issued the following Press Release on March 26, 2015.

SOUTHFIELD, Mich., March 26, 2015 – Verizon Wireless, a technology leader with the nation’s largest and most reliable 4G LTE network, announced today that the company is partnering with Techweek, the nation’s leading technology conference, for an Emerging Cities Summit as part of Techweek Detroit 2015 from April 13 to April 19. Verizon Wireless Region President Lauren-Love Wright, a Detroit native, made the announcement at Verizon’s regional headquarters in Metro Detroit and will also keynote the summit.

“Detroit’s success today is driven by those who are using technology and ingenuity to solve everyday challenges,” said Lauren Love-Wright, Verizon Wireless region president for Michigan, Indiana, and Kentucky. “Verizon is dedicated to being a strong partner within Detroit’s technology community, and to investing in its continued growth. Partnering with the city’s largest technology conference is a natural extension of this ongoing commitment.”

“Our mission is to build a better world through tech entrepreneurship,” said Sam Kennedy, executive director at Techweek. “Techweek Detroit brings together tech leaders and innovators who are rebuilding the city. Partners like Verizon help illustrate more than just the good momentum throughout Michigan’s entrepreneurial community—at Techweek, you will be able to see the tangible results from Verizon’s work with tech companies in the region, especially in the Internet of Things space.”

Among the conference’s multifaceted offerings, Verizon is presenting a summit designed to focus on the ways technology can enhance and strengthen municipal operations, with an overview of Verizon’s Smart Cities solutions. These technologies utilize real-time information and analytics to develop strategies to improve infrastructure, plan for long-term growth, create more energy-efficient environments, and keep people safe. Additionally, Love-Wright will provide the keynote address for the Emerging Cities Summit, which will explore how the technology industry is leading the way to support cities like Detroit in its resurgence as an economic and cultural center for the region.

In the past year, Verizon has invested $100 million in wireless network improvements for key parts of Detroit. Overall, Verizon has spent $2.7 billion on wireless network investments in Michigan since 2000. Verizon continues to add extra capacity in high-traffic parts of Detroit, including both XLTE and small cell deployments to offer customers a stronger network experience. XLTE delivers faster peak data speeds and a minimum of double the bandwidth to 4G LTE customers.

Verizon regularly tests, maintains and fine-tunes the network to ensure that customers stay connected. The Verizon network test drive team is one of the largest of its kind of any U.S. wireless company. Every year, dedicated test men and women drive roughly 1 million miles – including Detroit – in specially equipped vehicles to conduct more than 3 million voice call attempts and more than 12 million data tests across the country to compare the performance of the Verizon Wireless network with our competitors’ networks.
